Lear. Thou think'ſt tis much, that this crulentious ſtorme Inuades vs to the skin, ſo tis to thee,
But where the greater malady is fixt,
The leſſer is ſcarſe felt, thou would'ſt ſhun a Beare,
But if thy flight lay toward the raging ſea,
Thoud'ſt meete the beare it'h mouth, when the mind's free,
The bodies delicate, the tempeſt in my minde,
Doth from my ſences take all feeling elſe,
Saue what beares their filiall ingratitude,
Is it not as this mouth ſhould teare this hand
For lifting food to it? but I will puniſh ſure;
No I will weepe no more; in ſuch a night as this!
O Regan, Gonorill, your old kinde father Whoſe franke heart gaue you all, O that way madneſſe lies,
Let me ſhunne that, no more of that.

Kent. Good my Lord enter.

Lear. Prethee go in thy ſelfe, ſeeke thy owne eaſe,
This tempeſt will not giue me leaue to ponder On things would hurt me more, but Ile go in, Poore naked wretches, where ſo ere you are
That bide the pelting of this pittileſſe night,
How ſhall your houſe-leſſe heads, and vnfed ſides,
Your loopt and windowed raggedneſſe defend you
From ſeaſons ſuch as theſe, O I haue tane Too little care of this, take phyſicke pompe, Expoſe thy ſelfe to feele what wretches feele,
That thou maiſt ſhake the ſuperflux to them,
And ſhew the heauens more iuſt.

Foole. Come not in here Nunckle, here's a ſpirit, helpe me, helpe me.

Kent. Giue me thy hand, who's there?

Foole. A ſpirit, he ſayes his name is poore Tom.

Kent. What art thou that doſt grumble there in the ſtraw? come foorth.

Edg. Away, the foule fiend followes me, through the ſharpe hathorne blowes the cold winde, goe to thy cold bed & warme thee.

Lear. Haſt thou giuen a come to this?

Edg. Who giues any th
fiend hath led through fire, ore bog and quagmire, that halters in his pue, ſet ratsb of heart, to ride on a bay tr
es, to courſe his owne ſhad Toms a cold, bleſſe thee fro taking, do poore Tom ſome there could I haue him now

Lear. What, his daughte
Couldſt thou ſaue nothing

Foole. Nay he reſerued a med.

Lear. Now all the plague
Hang fated ore mens faults
Kent. He hath no daught
Lear. Death traitor, noth
To ſuch a lowneſſe, but his
Is it the faſhion that diſcard
Should haue thus little mer
Iudicious puniſhment, twa
Begot thoſe Pelicane daug
Edg. Pelicock ſate on pel Foole. This cold night wi
Edg. Take heed of the fo words iuſtly, ſweare not, co
ſet not thy ſweet heart on p Lear. What haſt thou bee Edg. A ſeruingman, prou
haire, wore gloues in my ca
and did the acte of darkneſ ſpake words, and broke th
that ſlept in the contriuing ued I deepely, dice dearely Turke, falſe of heart, light c

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE King Lear (STC 22293) LONDON, 1608 [1619] THE BRITISH LIBRARY (C.1